

Sarah's Choice and a Bridge to Holes

Literature Analysis 7-8 - Thursday, September 3, 2026

Quick Refresh: Sarah, Plain and Tall, Chapters 6-9

In the final chapters, Sarah keeps learning prairie life while still missing the sea. Anna and Caleb watch closely because they fear she may leave. When Sarah goes to town alone, the family worries. Her return matters because it shows she is choosing this family and this new home.

Evidence Tracker

Use details from the chapters to explain what Sarah feels and why her final decision matters.

What Sarah does or says	What it reveals about her	Why it matters to the family

Claim Practice

Complete the claim, then support it with two specific pieces of evidence.

Sarah chooses to stay because

Evidence 1:

Evidence 2:

From Prairie Home to Camp Green Lake

Preview work for Holes by Louis Sachar - no spoilers beyond the opening setup.

Setting Contrast

A setting is more than a place. It can create pressure, danger, hope, or conflict for characters.

Sarah, Plain and Tall: prairie home	Holes: Camp Green Lake
What details make this place difficult?	What details make this place difficult?
What does this place make the characters want?	What might this place make Stanley want?

Fairness and First Impressions

In the opening of Holes, Stanley is sent to Camp Green Lake after being accused of stealing. Before judging him, readers have to ask what the text actually proves.

What would count as fair evidence against Stanley?

What would count as unfair treatment?

Exit Response

Answer in 4-6 complete sentences. Use at least one detail from Sarah, Plain and Tall and one prediction about Holes.

How can a difficult place change what a character wants or chooses?